Basic operation:

- A subscription to Cooptel's GAC service includes *95 functions (to use telephone service management functions), as well as *96 (to automatically add the last incoming number to your list of blocked numbers). Your service can also be managed on the web portal. Consult the complementary guide to this one for Internet management, for more details to the latter subject.
- By subscribing, all your calls from an unknown system number will be challenged by default. If you accept the call, the number will automatically be added to your list of authorized numbers.
- If you activate the Do Not Disturb function, a caller can reach you by component of the exemption code. On the other hand, in case of emergency and that the caller does not know your exemption code, he will have to stay online for over 20 seconds so that his call is routed.

SOME DEFINITIONS :

Do not disturb: You will not receive calls within the time slots specified unless a caller knows your override code.

Exemption Code: A 4-digit code allowing the caller to reach you, even if you have activated the Do Not Disturb function.

Private Caller: Even if you have caller ID on your telephone service, it is possible for callers to block their number. You can block them without knowing their number.
